MISSION

Promoting social security worldwide

The International Social Security Association (ISSA) is the world’s leading international organization for social security institutions and government departments.

The ISSA promotes excellence in social security through offering its member institutions professional guidelines and capacity building as part of its Centre for Excellence, proposing innovative solutions to address key social security challenges, sharing unique international data as well as organizing high-level regional and global events.

Supporting its member institutions to develop dynamic social security systems and policy throughout the world, the ISSA was founded in 1927 under the auspices of the International Labour Organization (ILO).

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Building a stronger ISSA

In the last year, the International Social Security Association (ISSA) has taken important new steps in building and consolidating its global membership, cooperating with international partners, and strengthening its influence on the global stage. This makes us all stronger in promoting universal social protection towards 2030.

Our Association plays a unique role, being the only global community of social security institutions. Our role is to promote excellence in social security, by seeking quality and efficiency in its implementation and delivery, and taking the necessary steps to shape the future of social security. The ISSA’s members in 159 countries already provide social security to more than three billion people every day. While this is a remarkable achievement, our ambitions are much higher. As a member of the Global Partnership for Universal Social Protection and associate to the G20 Labour Ministers meeting, the ISSA aims to contribute to achieving universal social protection by 2030, in line with the Sustainable Development Goals.

These last months, in the context of the challenges posed by the new coronavirus (COVID-19), social security once again demonstrated its essential role for individuals, societies and economies. Governments and institutions have demonstrated their commitment to dynamic social security, by taking action quickly to strengthen, adjust, innovate and introduce social security measures and schemes for those who fell ill, those who had to care for others, those that were out of work and vulnerable groups in our society.

I am proud to be the President of the ISSA, and I am thankful and humble for my re-election at the WSSF in Brussels for another three-year period. My ambition is to continue building this Association, so that we together can strengthen the delivery of social security to the world’s population.

“The ISSA ensures that social security institutions have a voice at the global level.”
INTERVIEW WITH THE SECRETARY GENERAL

Closer to our members
Marcelo Abi-Ramia Caetano

After one and half years in office, Marcelo Abi-Ramia Caetano has already experienced many highlights. His key message is that the ISSA is a strong community, and his priority is to bring the Association even closer to its members.

What were some of the key moments for you during the last year?
There have been many memorable moments for me in the past 18 months, such as the World Social Security Forum in Belgium and our Regional Social Security Forum for Europe in Azerbaijan. I have also had very valuable personal encounters and discussions with members who I have visited to learn more about their challenges and how the ISSA can be of assistance. Over the last months, working with the members, and also with ISSA staff, on rapid social security responses to the coronavirus crisis has been extremely important.

What did you learn from these meetings and discussions with members?
The one thing that has really impressed me is the high level of engagement and commitment that so many of our members have to our Association. The ISSA is truly a global community of leaders and professionals that are committed to working together to promote social security both at home and internationally. Building on this, the ISSA has to further intensify its efforts to support its members through high quality services and products. Early this year, we rapidly set up the ISSA Monitor “Coronavirus – Social Security Responses”, to map and share information and analysis about the large variety and scope of measures put in place by governments and social security institutions around the world. This is an example of how we can effectively work together through a global platform.

What are the key priority topics that members have brought forward?

The priorities of members vary from region to region, the risks covered and several other factors. At the same time, members have a number of things in common. For example, growing public expectations and technological change drive members to strengthen their performance in managing social security. Another point is that changing labour markets have an impact on how institutions work to extend and maintain social protection in line with global goals. Also, ageing populations is now a truly global issue for social security. Finally, members are keen on strengthening the positive role of social security for inclusive growth in view of increasing inequalities.

What will ISSA do to bring forward new knowledge on these challenges and opportunities for social security?

Having listened to members, we have made the four topics I just mentioned our priorities for ISSA activities during the triennium 2020–2022. In collaboration with the technical commissions and regional structures, we will prepare publications, organize events and facilitate the exchange of experiences in these areas. We will obviously tailor the specific issues to various regional and branch needs, to make our activities as relevant as possible for members. We will also continue to react quickly when global or regional events demand it, such as during the coronavirus crisis this year.

What can we expect from the ISSA in the new programme period?

We have once again a wide range of interesting activities, and I believe that members will be interested in a number of novelties. This includes new sets of ISSA Guidelines, a new international conference dedicated to management of social security, and extended knowledge in the ISSA country profiles. We will also increase the responsiveness and flexibility of our services. My objective is that we increase our capacity to tailor our products to the practical needs of members, and that we ensure that each member will have an excellent service experience when interacting with the ISSA.
From 14 to 18 October 2019, the global community of social security leaders and experts gathered in the Belgian capital of Brussels for the World Social Security Forum. With 1,300 registered participants from almost 400 organizations and more than 150 countries, this was the biggest ISSA event ever.

This fifth World Social Security Forum was a success thanks to the great cooperation between the ISSA and the hosts, the public social security institutions of Belgium, as well as the multitude of contributions from ISSA members and partners from around the world.

The daily highlights are outlined on the following page.
Monday 14 October
Social security challenges and innovative responses
- Celebrating 75 years of social security in Belgium, the Belgian hosts showcased their modern, flexible and digital approaches to delivering benefits and services.
- Launch of the concluding report of the three-year project 10 Global Challenges for Social Security, highlighting innovative solutions and practices from ISSA members.

Tuesday 15 October
Shaping the future of social security
- The ISSA launched a new flagship report, Social security for the digital age, addressing major trends in how social security is influenced by, and makes use of, new digital technologies.
- Discussions on how to address the challenge and harvest the opportunities that follow the digital revolution.

Wednesday 16 October
Excellence and innovation in social security
- The new ISSA Guidelines on error, evasion and fraud in social security systems, and the revision of eight other sets of guidelines, were launched and discussed in parallel sessions.
- The Innovation Zone showcased innovative tools and practices by ISSA member institutions.

Thursday 17 October
Strengthening the social impact of social security
- The Centenary of the International Labour Organization (ILO), the ISSA’s longstanding partner, was marked in a special session on achieving universal social protection by 2030.
- Plenary and parallel sessions addressing how to build, strengthen, evolve and adjust social security in light of major societal changes.

Friday 18 October
Leaving no one behind – Realizing a global commitment
- High-level discussions at the World Social Security Summit with ministers and representatives from Algeria, Belgium, China, Jamaica, Lithuania, Malaysia, the Russian Federation, the European Commission, ILO, United Nations and World Bank.
- The Government of Rwanda received the ISSA Award for Outstanding Achievement in Social Security for achieving almost full health insurance coverage in less than 20 years.

Outstanding Achievement Award

The Rwandan Government received the ISSA Award for Outstanding Achievement in Social Security at the World Social Security Forum. With a community-based approach, Rwanda has achieved almost universal health coverage in less than 20 years. Here is an interview with Dr Solange Hakiba, Deputy Director General of the Rwanda Social Security Board.

“If Rwanda did it, any country can do it!”
— Dr Solange Hakiba, Deputy Director General, Rwanda Social Security Board

What is the significance of winning the ISSA Award for Outstanding Achievement in Social Security?
The recognition of its Community-Based Health Insurance scheme achievements by the ISSA is a great encouragement for the Rwandan Government. It sends an important message globally that prioritizing health is the right thing to do and that with commitment and joint stakeholders’ efforts, results and impact are possible. If Rwanda did it, any country can do it!

What were the major steps made in Rwanda that helped them win the ISSA Award?
Rwanda, for the last 25 years, has strived to design social security products to effectively cover its informal sector, both financially and in terms of health. Health was recognized early on as an important pillar for the national development and social cohesion. Health is a right and every leader and stakeholder works from that perspective to deliver more and better for the population.

What are the challenges ahead and how is Rwanda working to further strengthen social security?
The design and implementation of social security schemes targeting the informal economy are allowing Rwanda to better deliver its commitment to protect its population from financial or health hardship. Among the challenges faced at this time are the setup of a unique identifier for the under-sixteens and the digitalization of health claims. Flexible and specific communication will also allow to engage the most hard-to-reach population with targeting awareness messages.

How do you see the development of social security on the African continent?
African countries have put universal health coverage at the centre of their priorities and community initiatives are taking this agenda forward. Peer learning and experience sharing have been accelerated by the digital era and regional coalitions are driving the expertise that will support implementation of the social security guidelines and best practices. With consistency and accountability towards the beneficiaries, African countries will achieve great progress.
The #protectingyou2019 campaign was launched for the WSSF, inviting members and partners of the ISSA to share stories on how social security protects people in a changing world. A new ISSA Communications Network was also set up to strengthen the coordination and joint action on communication between the ISSA and its member institutions. Here are some of the powerful stories that surfaced from the campaign.
Coronavirus monitor

Tackling the coronavirus crisis with social security

During the first half of 2020, social security was at the forefront of tackling the social and economic consequences of the global coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. The ISSA set up a coronavirus monitor, which includes a new webinar series on social security responses to share information and experiences among its member institutions on how to tackle this major challenge.

The coronavirus pandemic that spread across the globe in a matter of weeks in early 2020 put governments and social security institutions under unprecedented pressure. Economic lockdown and measures to avoid spreading the virus led to disruption of social and economic structures, massive lay-offs and economic recession.

Governments quickly looked to social security to cushion the social and economic consequences for people, business and society. Social security institutions were able to deliver this via strengthened short-term work and partial unemployment schemes, sickness benefit schemes, social security for the self-employed, family and child benefits, along with exemptions and postponements of social security contributions.

Social security institutions have risen to this challenge impressively. While social security claims have exploded, schemes have been adjusted and new schemes introduced. At the same time, social security institutions had to reorganize their ways of working, including generalised teleworking, adjust their interaction with beneficiaries, including upscaling and launching new online services, and handle a massive increase in requests for information. This has demonstrated once again the vital role social security institutions play in society.

The 17 regional structures play an important role in strengthening the outreach of the ISSA and regional cooperation on social security. Each regional structure is hosted by an ISSA member institution and has a dedicated Regional Liaison Officer.

The ISSA takes this opportunity to thank the National Social Security Fund of Gabon for its support, and the National Social Security Fund of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, for taking over as host of the Liaison Office for Central Africa in March 2020.

In addition, the ISSA congratulates the Fiji National Provident Fund on the official opening of the Focal Point for the Pacific Island Countries in January 2020, and the National Institute of Social Security in Brazil, for boosting the Focal Point for Portuguese speaking countries.

INTERVIEW

Joining the ISSA

The International Social Security Association (ISSA) was pleased to welcome 17 institutions from different corners of the world as new members since 2019. The Federal Social Insurance Council in Argentina has answered a few questions on its reasons for joining and its expectations as an ISSA member.

Why did your institution decide to become a member of the ISSA?
The ISSA is the largest global organization on social security, where we can share experiences and take inspiration from those implemented in different countries around the globe.

What are the most important products and services that the ISSA can provide to your institution?
Participation in the technical commissions; regional trainings, global and regional events and the opportunity to participate in social security cooperation in the region.

How do you plan to engage with the ISSA and its activities in the time ahead?
Maintaining permanent contact and participation with the Association, and very importantly with our regional coordinator in the ISSA.

What is your message to other social security institutions that are considering joining the ISSA?
That they should do so, because we must bring universality of social security to life, and this can only be done through the participation in global fora and permanent international dialogue as found in the ISSA.

The 13 ISSA technical commissions bring together more than 110 leaders and senior experts from member institutions and play a crucial role in the implementation of the Association’s activities.

As a result of their work during the triennium 2017–2019, the technical commissions contributed significantly to the technical programme of the World Social Security Forum, including through the publication of a number of high quality reports. They also provided leadership in the review of eight sets of ISSA Guidelines, and the preparation of the new ISSA Guidelines on error, evasion and fraud in social security systems (see p. 14).

New ISSA Guidelines on error, evasion and fraud

Error, evasion and fraud represent an increasing preoccupation for social security institutions, and the ISSA Guidelines on error, evasion and fraud in social security systems were launched at the World Social Security Forum (WSSF) in October 2019 to address these key issues.

Social security institutions depend on the trust of citizens, society and political institutions. Their capability to prevent and tackle cases of error, evasion and fraud is therefore of crucial importance. While these are not new issues for social security institutions, the experience of ISSA member institutions shows that there is a need to deal with them in a more coherent and systematic way.

The new Guidelines on error, evasion and fraud were developed through a strong joint effort of the General Secretariat of the ISSA and its member institutions, in particular through the ISSA Technical Commission on Contribution, Collection and Compliance, which coordinated the process. Also, the Central Agency of Social Security Bodies (Acoss), France, provided substantial support and the General Treasury of Social Security, Spain, hosted an international seminar on the topic. With these contributions, the new Guidelines were well received at the launch during the WSSF in Brussels, Belgium.

Broader revision of the ISSA Guidelines

Of the 12 existing sets of ISSA Guidelines, eight of them have been updated and were launched at the WSSF. As social security institutions operate in a quickly changing environment, each set of ISSA Guidelines goes through a revision process after six years.

One of the important improvements made for the new versions was the inclusion of branch perspectives into crosscutting Guidelines, such as on good governance, information and communication technology (ICT) and service quality. Also, specific chapters on e-health and business processes, taking into consideration different social security branches, were included in the Guidelines on ICT.

The basis for the Centre for Excellence

The ISSA Guidelines are the foundation of the ISSA Centre for Excellence, which aims to assist member institutions in delivering excellence in social security. The guidelines are used for capacity building through the diploma trainings and the workshops of the ISSA Academy, they are complemented by ISSA Good Practices, and they are the basis for the ISSA Recognition programme.
Peer-to-peer problem solving

The ISSA Academy workshops are highly valuable opportunities for peer-to-peer problem solving among senior managers. In 2019, 338 participants from 69 countries took part in the 12 Academy workshops.

Academy workshops build on the real-life challenges of social security managers and institutions. Participants are required to report on the challenges they wish to address beforehand, and the workshop expert then builds the programme around their input. Relevant ISSA Guidelines are used to structure the discussions towards practical and effective solutions.

The ISSA Academy workshop that took place in Seoul, Republic of Korea, in November 2019, is a good example. Managers and experts from social security institutions in Bhutan, India, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, Oman, Vietnam and the host country worked together on issues of good governance in social security.

“The Academy workshop provided a rich learning opportunity for me personally and for my organization. In addition to discussing common challenges and innovative approaches with colleagues from other countries and institutions, I could build a network that will undoubtedly be helpful in my future work,” said Yasuyuki Nagamine of the Japan Pension Service.

ISSA Diploma training

Building staff competencies

In the last year, 200 staff from ISSA member institutions all over the world participated in ISSA Diploma training courses to increase their competencies. These courses are offered in cooperation with certified training partners.

In 2019, more than 90 participants from social security institutions all over the world gathered at the ITCILO in Turin, Italy, for a week of training on the ISSA Guidelines. Here is what some participants had to say about this experience.

“It is a very fulfilling experience!”
— Devonte Cory Peters*

“This course will help me make a difference for social security in our community, and to take care of all the customers in our region and country.”

Raiya Hamed Saif Al Busidi,
Public Authority for Social Insurance, Oman,
Service Quality

“This course is very important to me, because to be a successful social security institution, you cannot underrate service quality. It is the bedrock of what we do.”

Emefa Agonyo,
Social Security and National Insurance Trust, Ghana,
Service Quality

“My participation will help me better understand some of the technologies we can use to extend the social security services to the informal sector.”

Mukuka Kangwa,
National Pension Scheme Authority, Zambia,
Information and Communication Technology
The in-depth Diploma training courses build on the ISSA Guidelines and aim to support member institutions to develop staff competencies in line with internationally recognized professional standards. Since mid-2019, 25 week-long training courses have been run by the National School for Social Security in France (EN3S), the Muhanna Foundation from Jordan and the International Training Centre (ITC/ILO) in Italy. In addition, the Institute for Work and Health of the German Social Accident Insurance (IAG), assisted the ISSA in undertaking an evaluation of the Diploma training programme. All the training partners were invited to contribute to the evaluation, which has helped the ISSA further improve and develop this programme.

ISSA RECOGNITION

Build trust in your organization

Interest in the ISSA Recognition programme has been growing fast. It is a unique way for social security institutions to ensure business processes in line with international best practice and to demonstrate their commitment to excellence. This increases both internal and external trust in the organization.

During the WSSF in October 2019, seven ISSA member institutions from four continents received the ISSA Certificate of Excellence for successful implementation of the ISSA Guidelines in six different areas:

- BPJS Ketenagakerjaan, Indonesia: Information and Communication Technology; Return to Work and Reintegration
- Department of Employment Affairs and Social Protection, Ireland: Service Quality
- Social Security Corporation, Jordan: Prevention
- Social Security Organisation (PERKESO), Malaysia: Contribution Collection and Compliance
- Pension Fund of Morocco (CMR): Good Governance
- Social Insurance Fund of the Russian Federation: Return to Work and Reintegration
- Bank Employees’ Pension Fund (CJPB), Uruguay: Contribution Collection and Compliance

In addition, three other institutions received ISSA Recognition in 2019:

- Workplace Safety and Insurance Board (WSIB), Ontario, Canada: Return to Work and Reintegration
- Mutual for Safety CChC, Chile: Good Governance
- National Social Insurance Fund, Cameroon: Good Governance

Why participate in the ISSA Recognition programme?

John McKeon, Secretary General of the Department of Employment Affairs and Social Protection, Ireland, highlights three reasons for implementing the ISSA Guidelines and participating in the ISSA Recognition programme:

1. It brings you back to the fundamentals of management and good processes.
2. It protects against complacency and forces you to focus on your customers and services.
3. It is a mechanism to engage with your staff and managers.
MEMBER STORY

Excellence in return to work and reintegration

Ontario, Canada’s Workplace Safety and Insurance Board (WSIB) was the first organization to finish the ISSA Recognition Programme for return to work and reintegration.

Going through the ISSA Recognition Programme was an opportunity for the WSIB to assess and improve its procedures on return to work and reintegration, and make sure they are in line international standards in the area, notably the ISSA Guidelines on return to work and reintegration.

The ISSA President, Prof. Dr Joachim Breuer, handed over the Certificate of Excellence to the WSIB, at the Conference of Canadian Society of Professionals in Disability Management on October 23, 2019.

Great results, great motivation

Joachim Breuer pointed out that the WSIB is leading the way in helping people get back to safe and lasting work, as soon as they can after a workplace injury or illness. “Their innovative and collaborative approach to return to work truly merits the ISSA Certificate of Excellence,” he said.

The WSIB provides wage-loss benefits, medical coverage and support to help people get back to work. Funded by businesses, the WSIB also provides no-fault collective liability insurance and access to industry-specific health and safety information. It is one of the largest insurance organizations in North America, covering more than five million people in more than 300,000 workplaces across the province of Ontario.
A new triennium
From 10 global challenges to

Between 2016 and 2019, the ISSA ran a ground-breaking research project to identify and analyse ten global challenges facing social security. This was the first ever initiative of its kind building on the knowledge and experience of social security professionals around the world.

Kicked-off with a first flagship report at the World Social Security Forum (WSSF) in Panama in 2016, this was followed by four regional reports for the Americas (2017), Africa (2018), Asia and the Pacific (2018) and Europe (2019), each with its own regional ranking of the challenges. Finally, a new global report was produced for the WSSF in Belgium in 2019, highlighting innovative solutions and good practices from ISSA member institutions.

4 priorities

Building on this new knowledge and distilling its essence, during 2020–2022 the ISSA will focus on four major issues that social security need to tackle in the decade ahead. Below, is a graphic illustration of the 10 global challenges, how they were ranked by region, and how they lead to the four major issues in focus during this ISSA triennium.

This transitions into four key priority issues for the triennium 2020–2022:

1. The future of social security administration and management
2. Meeting the evolving needs of an ageing population
3. Social security coverage in a changing world
4. The role of social security in promoting inclusive growth and social cohesion

International Social Security Review

First published in 1948, the International Social Security Review (ISSR) is the world’s major quarterly publication in the field of social security. A special issue linked to ISSA programme priorities and a thematic issue were among the four issues published in 2019/20.

The 2019 special issue “Social security and the digital economy” (Vol. 72, No. 3) was prepared to accompany the discussions undertaken at the World Social Security Forum in Brussels. The content addressed a number of key perspectives concerning how social security systems are being affected by the increasing shift to the digital economy, with important impacts on labour markets and the economic security of workers and their families. For ISSA member organizations, these developments demand innovative responses in relation to ensuring the sustainable and adequate financing of social security systems and the appropriate design of social security benefits and services.

ISSA members have free access to the ISSR through My ISSA.

ISSA Country Profiles

The ISSA website offers access to structured, comparative profiles of social security systems and programmes in 184 countries and territories. Every six months on a rolling basis, a regional update for either Asia and the Pacific, Africa, the Americas or Europe is produced, with reports providing an overview of the features of social security programmes in the particular region.

Good Practices in Social Security

The ISSA Good Practices database includes over 900 good practices from ISSA member institutions. The identification and sharing of good practices helps social security institutions to improve their operational and administrative effectiveness and efficiency. The good practices are categorized and can be filtered by region, country, topic and period of implementation. This is a unique source of knowledge and experiences that can serve as inspiration and guidance for ISSA member institutions.
